COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

On motion of Representative Curtis, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, with the Speaker as Chairman, for the purpose of hearing from Congressman Jim Matheson.

On motion of Representative Ure, the Committee of the Whole was dissolved.

MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS

On motion of Representative Hansen, the House voted to print the remarks of Congressman Jim Matheson upon the pages of the House Journal.

REMARKS OF CONGRESSMAN JIM MATHESON

I would like to thank all members of the Utah House for this opportunity. It really is an honor to address you this morning. I certainly appreciate the offer extended to me by Speaker Stephens. It's wonderful to be here in our capital city on the eve of the 2002 Winter Olympics. The excitement of this once-in-a-lifetime event is indeed invigorating. When I flew in from Washington, D.C., last week, it was great to see so many Utahns wearing their colorful Olympic jackets and hats, standing by to help the athletes and visitors, and ready to make this the most successful Winter Olympic games ever. And I want to congratulate all of you for all the work you've done over the past several years to prepare for this event. Putting on the Olympic events is a team sport; before the athletes could come and dazzle us with their passion and their skill, each of you had to do some real heavy lifting to prepare the venues, and you certainly deserve our thanks.

Last year when I addressed this body, I pledged to work with you on behalf of the people of Utah that we represent, and this year I look forward to an expanded partnership with even more members of the Utah Legislature, from all corners of the state. The expansion, of course, may be driven a little bit by actions of this Legislature in terms of redistricting, and I want to share with you insight in a particular town in a new part of the state where I may be running. Some of you may have heard about this recently. There's a town in southern Utah, and I bet you guys can guess which one it is, where every year, when they'd have an election, the result would come back, and there would be 621 votes for the Republican and one for the Democrat. Year after year it would be those same totals, and everyone was trying to guess who this was. It's a secret ballot, so you don't get to see how people vote, but they had their suspicions about who this was. One year, this guy died, and there was an election a few weeks later and the results came in and it was 621 for the Republican and one for the Democrat. So the newspaper came out the next week and the headline said, "We buried the wrong man."

Last week I joined my colleagues in the house chamber to hear President Bush report on the state of the union. I was certainly inspired by his stirring words, and particularly his call to action. His mandate was, and I quote, "We must act, first and foremost, not as Republicans, not as Democrats, but as Americans." The president's words called to mind a letter that I recently received in my congressional office from a Utah Boy Scout. His letter said, "I have felt that we as a nation have come together since the past tragedies. I am proud to live in the United States and enjoy the freedoms that we have. I am currently working on my Citizenship in the Nation merit badge. What is something I can do, as an 11-year-old boy, to help the nation? I try to help people whenever I can, I work hard in school and try to make right choices." Isn't that what it is all about as we search for meaning in the aftermath of such a terrible tragedy as the attack on America? Our country is fighting a war, our economy is in a recession, and yet the American spirit continues to light the way.

As President Bush said, it was as if our entire country looked into a mirror and saw our better selves. We were reminded that we are citizens, with obligations to each other, to our country, and to history. That resolve helped us stand in lines to donate blood; it steered our urban search and rescue teams during 12-hour shifts at ground zero. It was personified in each act of compassion toward the victims, their families, our police and firefighters, and our men and women in uniform. It will steady us now as we work together on the most important issues facing our families, our communities, and our country.

As the economy has slowed, I've shared President Bush's concerns for helping those who have lost their jobs. I believe we can stimulate the economy in the short term in a way that doesn't actually threaten a healthy, long-term economy. We can work across party lines to improve access to health care for the unemployed and help them quickly find jobs in a recovering economy. Good jobs begin with good schools. In this body, you have taken the lead to maintain excellence in Utah's public education system. I was proud to work with members of both parties to support the president's leading initiative, which was education reform. I look forward this year to working with him on a key piece of legislation - The Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. Together we can keep the federal government's promises to improve flexibility for local schools, provide quality instruction for special-needs students, send more resources to the local level, and cut the red tape for our quiet classroom heroes, the dedicated teachers who fight for every child.

Utahns know that economic security can dissolve instantly in the face of injury or illness. I agree with the President that we need to take action to modernize Medicare so that seniors have access to prescription drugs. I want to be your advocate for funding reforms to give Utah the support and flexibility it needs in order to provide these vital programs.

Utah's extraordinary landscape is once again in the spotlight with the news that President Bush has been asked to declare the San Rafael Swell a national monument. I commend the Emery County Commissioners and Governor Leavitt for proposing an open and public process leading up to such a designation. This may be an important opportunity for all stakeholders to be at the table and to participate in the process to get last protection to one of the scenic and geologic wonders of the world.

Whether it involves improving security at airports or stockpiling vaccines to protect our citizens against biological attacks, I will continue to make homeland defense one of my top priorities. But even as we study ways to secure our food and water supplies, our electric transmission lines and gas pipelines, we know it will take all of us, pulling together, to provide for our common defense. Public employees on the front lines in Utah's cities and counties need the funding, the training, and the equipment to undertake what will be a massive effort, and I want your ideas on the best way to make that happen.

One of the most important lessons I've learned on this job is the value of listening to people. Whether I'm in Utah or in Washington, the fun part of the job is meeting with people, hearing their ideas, and finding a way to put good ideas to use. Hearing from Utahns has made me a better member of Congress. I'm very committed to continuing this practice in the next year.

Preparing for the Olympics here at home, and our national response to the tragedy of September 11, has renewed our focus on the importance of volunteering. Utahns know how to lend a hand, put a shoulder to the wheel, roll up their sleeves, and give something back. The value we place on helping others will now go global with the President's USA Freedom Corps. I'm pleased to have co-sponsored legislation that expands our national service program. I'm very excited to push this initiative to keep the spirit of volunteerism and investment in community alive after the 2002 Winter Games and beyond the war in Afghanistan.

No one could have predicted how drastically our world would change in one year's time, and life may never be the same. But life goes on, and our challenge as legislators is to listen, have an open door, and to work together, not as Republicans and Democrats, but as Americans. I know that as Utahns we're certainly up to that challenge.

I want to thank you for your time, and I'm certainly happy to answer any questions you may have.

Speaker Pro Tem Garn: Thank you, Congressman Matheson, we appreciate very much your being here today and appreciate your representation. Representative Arent, for questions.

Representative Arent: Thank you, Mr. Speaker Pro Tem and Congressman Matheson. Welcome to our body. Nice to have you here. I'm probably the person in the body that's known Jim the longest, having grown up across the street. You spoke this morning about education and your work last year, and I'm wondering what you think is the future in terms of the federal role in education.

Congressman Matheson: I personally believe the federal role out to be very limited. I think that what happened with the education reform that was passed last year was, it tried to consolidate programs and give more flexibility to the local level, which I think is a good idea. You all know the federal government represents about seven percent of education spending in our state, and that's the national average as well. But I do think it's important, as we look forward this next year, I mentioned we're going to be reauthorizing the IDEA, Individual Disability Education Act. I've met with every school superintendent in my congressional district, I've met with a lot of principals, I've met with a lot of teachers, and we have a problem when it comes to special education. There are two problems, really. One is the federal government has never lived up to its mandate where it said it would pay for 40 percent of the cost. We're up to around 15 percent right now. So number one, we ought to fund what we say we're going to fund. But that's only half the problem. The other problem is, and while it's a cliché to complain about red tape in government, this situation is a real problem. This program is fraught with bureaucracy in a way that we are driving people away from this profession. These are teachers that take on a tough task every day; we shouldn't be driving them away. So from a federal perspective on what we can do to affect education in states like Utah, that is the issue that is going to be taken on in Congress this year. I think it's very important. Number one, we ought to reform it so that it works better and is more streamlined in terms of how we implement it and, number two, we come up with the federal dollars that we said we would. It's going to allow for Utah, which is having to make up the difference right now, to use those dollars in other forms of education assistance.

Speaker Pro Tem Garn: Further questions for Congressman Matheson? Representative Daniels?

Representative Daniels: Thank you, Mr. Speaker Pro Tem. Congressman, as you know, we're in the midst of a serious budgetary problem here. Our revenues show that we have a tremendous shortfall and at the same time the federal government came back with some of the Medicaid reimbursements, things like that, that further affect our budgets. I'm wondering if you can tell us, from your perspective, what we can do at this level, what you can do at the federal level, or just ordinary Utahns can do to get us through this crisis that we have.

Congressman Matheson: There's no question that our economy has been in a recession. According to the economists it started last March. The average length of a recession in this country since World War II has been about ten months; that's about where we are right now. I think there are signs that the economy is starting to recover. I think that the tax cut that Congress passed last May, of which I was a supporter, is going to have a stimulant effect over the long run. I do think, from a federal perspective though, we ought to take a look at some type of short-term stimulus for our economy. I'm a little disappointed that, in Congress, members of both parties are just parading out their tired old agendas, now in the name of short-term economic stimulus. If we need short-term stimulus, let's do something that's quick, immediate, temporary, that stimulates the economy. I'll give you an idea that I think is a good idea: suspend paying payroll taxes for a month. That's going to help employees, that's going to help employers, puts money back in the economy. I think that's a good idea. But that's something that meets those criteria, something that's immediate, puts money in the economy right away, and it's short term to stimulate. So I think, from a federal level, that's what we ought to be looking at doing - things like that. But let's be confident that the business cycle is a reality and, while we can't predict exactly how the business cycle moves, I'm confident that this economy is going to be turning around, and I hope that that's going to be better in terms of the state revenues, which I understand the problems with the shortfalls here. We've got a problem at the federal level, too. I'm on the Budget Committee. A year ago we had a $5.6 trillion surplus projected over ten years; now we're down to $1.6 trillion over ten years. So we had $4 trillion go away in one year. That's a lot of money, but I think we have to recognize that we have to have confidence that this economy is going to turn around. I think there are signs it's doing it already.

Representative Ure: Thank you, welcome back home. The question I have, Congressman, is a philosophical question, and if we could step outside the bounds that we have the Olympics here, say we go a year from now. Where, in your own mind, do you draw the line between national security and personal rights of what Congress is doing right now? In my opinion we're going much, much further back than we were in the Cold War, and I'd just like to have you elaborate on it, as to where you think that line might be in your own personal opinion, Congressman.

Congressman Matheson: I appreciate that question. It's a relevant question that we need to continue to ask as we move into this new world, where we face new threats, both in terms of global terrorism and in terms of homeland security, but if we give up on all the basic freedoms that we believe in here, the terrorists win anyway. So that's a concern that I share with you. You know, Congress passed some legislation which allowed greater authority for the Department of Justice and we put in sort of this stop gap, if you will, where everything expires in five years. That may not be a perfect solution to this, but it's one way to address concerns of if we went too far in expanding the abilities of the Justice Department. Because after five years, we would have to affirmatively vote to continue that or we're going to go back to where we were before September 11. That wasn't a perfect bill; I'm not going to tell you it was. In fact, I think the bill that the House Judiciary Committee passed, which was approved, by the way, unanimously, every Democrat and Republican voted for it, I wish that was the bill that actually became law in terms of what it did for expanding powers for our Justice Department. Instead, the administration wanted a more aggressive set of abilities and there was a compromise that occurred; but it does have that five-year sunset on it. So if this is something that we need to be looking at over the next five years to determine if it did go too far because, as I said at the outset, I share your concerns about maintaining our personal freedoms.

Speaker Pro Tem Garn: Congressman Matheson, thank you so much for being here today. We appreciate it.
